Global Overview:

United States:

The US market closed higher, with the S&P 500 (+0.76%) posting the highest advance and recording a new maximum of 52 weeks, followed by the Nasdaq (+0.71%) and the Dow Jones (+0.67%). This breakthrough came after Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin discussed the lifting of some or all of the tariffs imposed on Chinese imports, and suggested offering a reduction of tariffs in trade discussions on January 30. In business news, quarterly earnings of Morgan Stanley (+4.41%) did not meet expectations because revenues from bond operations declined more than competitors, dropping 30% to $564 million while operating income before taxes were of $1.9 billion, 25% less than the $2.5 billion reported the previous year. On the other hand, Walmart (+0.40%) mentioned that it has partnered with four other companies such as Point Pickup and Skipcart, part of its goal of delivering groceries at home in more than 100 cities in the country. Finally, Fossil Group (+3.33%) indicated that it would sell its intellectual property related to smart watch technology to Google Alphabet Inc. for $40 million, which would increase the shares of the selling company by up to 11%.

Europe:

The European market closed down, with the FTSE 100 (-0.40%) showing the greatest decline, highlighting that British Prime Minister Theresa May hopes to find a parliamentary consensus on Brexit, however, there were few signs that the leaders of the main parties (Conservative and Labor opposition) were prepared to engage in the key demands. On the other hand, the UK real estate market is slowing, as housing sales expectations fell to their lowest level in 20 years, while forecasted demand for mortgage loans dropped to -17.5 in the fourth quarter of 2018, its lowest level since the end of 2010. The CAC 40 fell by -0.40% after the financial services company, Société Générale SA (-5.66%) indicated that it expects that revenues in this area will fall by 20% in the fourth quarter and 10% for 2018. Also, the DAX and FTSE MIB of Italy were reduced by -0.32% and -0.04%, respectively. Regarding commodity news, oil traders are convinced that OPEC's action to reduce oil production will be enough to offset the impact of conventional oil production, where Brent (+0.18%) trades at $61.43 a barrel, well below the maximum of $85 at the beginning of October 2018.

Asia:

The Asian market closed down after the research report to Huawei and the reduction of growth prospects in Chinese provinces. In Hong Kong, the Hang Seng had a -0.54% setback for the 29th consecutive day, while the CSI 300 fell -0.55%. In China, the expectation remains that the economy will slow to 6.3% this year, being the weakest in 29 years because exports are affected by tariffs and domestic demand and investment are softened. Likewise, the People's Bank of China is expected to maintain the reference interest rate at 4.35% throughout the year. The Nikkei 225 retreated -0.20%, highlighting that the Japanese manufacturer of precision engines, Nidec (+0.49%) reduced its perspective of annual operating profits in a quarter to 145 billion yen, being 25.6% less than the previous estimates; harmed by lower demand from car and appliance manufacturers in China. In business news, Chinese private company Huawei faces an investigation for allegedly stealing trade secrets from US companies such as T-Mobile. Based on a Wall Street report, that investigation is the product of several civil suits against the company and an accusation could come soon, which fuels further fears of the relationship between the two countries.
