Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the session with negative results, after former national security adviser Michael Flynn pleaded guilty to lying to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and promised full cooperation with the special lawyer's investigation in Russia, adding a new element of political uncertainty to the markets. In addition, the final vote on the bill was expected late Thursday, but lasted until Friday because several issues have not yet been resolved. Among the key concerns is how to finance tax cuts. On Thursday, the Joint Committee on Taxes said the Senate bill would generate more than $ 400 billion in revenue over 10 years through economic growth, but that's not enough to offset the cost of the $ 1.4 trillion. In business news, Blue Apron Holdings Inc.'s stock price rose + 8.36%, after the food-game maker struggled late on Thursday installed chief financial officer Brad Dickerson as chief executive, displacing co-founder Matthew Saltburg. Finally, the price of West Texas rose around +1.70%, reaching a price of 58 dollars a barrel, this was due to OPEC and its allies, including Russia, extending the supply limits until the end of next year.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the day with mixed results among its main indices. European shares lost the day due to the events related to tax reform in the United States, lawmakers have some problems to pass the new law. The European benchmark managed to recover after losing at the beginning of the oil and gas sectors along with the health care sector, which reported losses today. In addition, technological, financial and industrial actions were the ones that lost the most. The Stoxx Europe 600 Financial Services Index fell close to -0.3%. The financial actions were among those affected by the delay in the tax reform in Washington. "The short-term price action of the dollar depends on how fast the Senate goes through the project, but investors remain skeptical: they know that even if the bill is approved by the Senate, it will formally take time to become law and this weighs on the outlook for the dollar, so patience is recommended," said Konstantinos Anthis, an ADS Securities research, in a note. Regarding the economic data, IHS Markit said that its final reading of November manufacturing PMI for the Eurozone reached 60.1, above the October result of 58.5 and that it marked its best reading since April 2000. And it said that the PMI of Manufacturing in the United Kingdom for November was 58.2, better than the Factset estimate of 56.5.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended today's session with mixed results among its main indices. Japan's benchmark index, the Nikkei 225, held up for the third day in a row, boosted by oil, steel and machinery shares. However, at the beginning of the session, the index retreated briefly due to news that the United States Senate had delayed the vote to review the proposed tax cuts by the Republican party until at least next Friday. This briefly affected the dollar and, consequently, the exporters. On the other hand, the Chinese market shares closed positive today, despite the end of the week to the downside, after a private survey showed that manufacturing activity grew at the slowest pace in five months in November. This was due to the fact that input costs remained high and strong pollution measures affected business confidence. Finally, Hong Kong stock declined in the session, with its Hang Seng benchmark ending up recording its biggest weekly loss in the last 11 months.
