Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the session with mixed results among its main indices. Both the Standard & Poor 500 and the Dow Jones Industrial reached intraday records after the Senate approved the proposed general revision of the tax code over the weekend. This raised hopes for a favorable tax reform for companies, which has driven the market in the last year. However, the Nasdaq fell back on the day, despite having been close to its own record, pressured by declines in some of the large-cap internet firms. In more detail, the financial stocks were the most earned today, reaching a maximum of 10 years. On the other hand, technological stocks were the ones that had the biggest drop of the day, affecting mainly the Nasdaq. In commodity news, the price of gold fell, overshadowed by the growth of US stocks and the strength of the dollar against its main rivals. Also, the price of oil fell for the first time in three sessions, after it was shown in recent data on the number of oil platforms, by Baker Hughes, that US drillers increased their number of platforms, fueling concerns about a growing domestic production, despite OPEC's decision to extend production cuts until the end of next year.

Europe:

The European stock market closed with positive results among its main indices. The English stocks closed with gains, with the industrial sector and the financial sector up. Regarding Brexit, Prime Minister Theresa May agreed to meet with European Commission President Jean-Claude Juncker in Brussels today, but the problem of the Irish border remains a complication for the Brexit agreement. Banking stocks continue to gain from new tax cuts, as many of these banks are interested in doing business in the United States. Among the most winners are Barclays PLC, Royal Bank of Scotland Group PLC, HSBC Holdings PLC and Lloyds Banking Group PLC. Regarding economic activity, IHS Markit / CIPS said that the PMI of construction production reached 53.1 for the month of November. This reading is the longest of five months, exceeding FactSet's 51.0 forecast. On the other hand, there is good news for Switzerland. UBS analysts positioned Switzerland as the No. 1 European market for investors, based on factors such as cheap valuations of stocks, potential to recover investment and divide-yield. In addition, the Swiss franc seems to be weakening further, due to the accommodative policies of the Swiss National Bank. Morgan Stanley reported that the economy is improving, the Swiss stock market is having its third rise so far this year.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended today's session with mixed results among its main indices, as investors are considering the impact of Friday's US news on their investment decisions. The US dollar recovered from Friday's sales, causing the Japanese yen to depreciate. But despite this fact, the Nikkei 225 index of Japan fell by 0.5%, caused by the large losses of companies such as Olympus (4.7%, its biggest drop in four months), Alps Electric (2.6%) and Nintendo (-1.9%). Regarding Hong Kong, after having losses every day of last week, the Hang Seng index lost almost half of its gains at the beginning of the day and ended up rising only 0.2%. This increase was due to the stocks related to oil (although the futures of this commodity fell by 0.5% during the Asian trade). Another factor that drove these gains were the companies Ping An and Tencent (+2.5% and +1.8%, respectively). On the other hand, the JSE benchmark index of Indonesia increased by 0.8%, making its performance to reach, so far this year, a 13% level thanks to its record highs in the last market closures.
