Global Overview:

United States:

The US markets ended their transactions in positive territory, while the markets recovered the losses suffered by the continuous concerns generated by the coronavirus, in a session full of economic figures and earnings reports. Investors remain vigilant about the development of the coronavirus, but market sentiment has improved with better than expected data output. According to the Department of Labor, the number of weekly unemployment claims decreased by 15,000 to end at 202,000 for the week ending February 1, reaching a minimum of 9 months. This possibly means that a narrower labor market will follow the longest economicexpansion in history. According to Reuters, nonfarm payrolls will likely increase by 160,000 jobs in January, in comparison to 145,000 in December. On the other hand, non-agricultural productivity, which is the production per hour per worker, increased at an annaulized rate of 1.4% in the fourth quarter of 2019. In ouroproates tocks, there tree of 15,06% where the reported higher earnings from users in the last quarter, exceeding expectations. Also, Boeing + 3.60%. In this way, the S&P 500 + 0.33%, DIJA + 0.3% and NASDAQ + 0.67% closed higher.

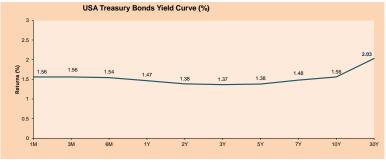

Europe:

European markets closed today with negative variations in their main stock indexes. The Euro Stoxx 50 had a variation (-0.14%), FTSE 100 (-0.27%), CAC 40 (-0.23%) and DAX (-0.15%). The subsectors that had the worst performance of the Euro Stoxx 50 were energy (-1.40%) and non-basic consumer products (-0.35%). These negative variations are due to investors monitoring the economic impact of the Chinese coronavirus epidemic. The country's National Health Commissionreported that the death toll from the outbreak had already reached 908 in China and 57 deaths reported on Sunday. On the other hand, votes are still counted after/reland held general elections this weekend, but preliminary results do not indicate an absolute majority for any of the major parties in the country. In corporate news, the German newspaper Handelsblatt reported Sunday that German automaker Dailmel palaned to out up to 15,000 jobs as cost reduction measures intensified. In addition, the shares of NMC Health listed in London rose 32% after announcing that it had received two preliminary approaches from private equity firms.

Asia:

Asian markets ended the day with negative returns, with the exception of China, which showed a positive trend. Investors observe the impacts of coronavirus expansion in Chinese factories. Market agents expected factories to resume their functions on Monday, but several may still remain closed. Shares in China recovered their losses from the previous session after China's official inflation data for January was published. The producer price index had gains of 0.1%. Consumer prices also showed a 5.4% rise, exceeding analyst expectations of 4.9%, according to Reuters surveys. In contrast, the Hong Kong index lost at the close, due to fallsamong restaurant operators due to fears related to the coronavirus. Regarding coronavirus, it already claimed more lives than the SARS. If factories remain closed, it would cause more disruptions in supply chains for companies. Many of the measures applied to stop the spread of the virus could mean an interruption in the production of electronics with the holiday season of 2020. Thus, Nikkel -0.6%, Hang Seng -0.59%, Singapore STI -0.58% and Kospi Composite -0.49% ended down; Shanghai + 0.51% and Shenzhen 1.22% rose.
