INDICES (6 MONTHS)

GLOBAL OVERVIEW

United States:

The main U.S. indices ended the session lower, following the release of the April consumer price report. The acceleration of inflation registered its highest levels since September 2008, which represents a 4.2% growth compared to the same month of 2020. In this regard, the Vice President of the FED, Richard Clarida, expressed that the price increases are mostly transitory and that he does not foresee a change in interest rates so far this year; he emphasized that the FED is prepared to face sudden increases in inflation rates. On the other hand, large cap stocks maintained their losses due to the rotation trend that still continues. Thus, the S&P 500 posted its worst intraday loss since February dragged down by the Non-Core Goods -3.28% and Technology -2.86% sectors. In individual stocks, Coinbase will announce earnings results tomorrow after the close of trading; shares have lost 16% of their value since the close of the first day of trading. Thus, DOW JONES -1.99%; S&P 500 -2.14%; NASDAQ -2.67% ended the day with losses.

Europe:

The main European markets ended the day with positive returns, due to the new high reached by oil prices, and signs of rapid economic recovery. The European STOXX 600 index regained value after falling almost 2% yesterday, its worst settlement this year. The oil and gas sectors rose 1.91% after the price of crude oil was boosted by signs of a rapid economic recovery and optimistic forecasts for energy demand. On the other hand, the main European stock markets ignored the U.S. inflation report, given the optimistic context of earnings reports from the euro zone countries. On the corporate reporting side, EDF +1.42%, Allianz +1.23%, Bayer +7.24% and Commerzbank +8.56% posted earnings before the bell. Reuters highlights energy stocks Royal Dutch Shell Plc +3.32%, BP Plc +3.51% and TechnipFMC +3.72% rose on the back of London oil rally. Thus, the STOXX 600 +0.30%, CAC 40 +0.19%, FTSE 100 +0.82% and DAX +0.20% closed with positive performances.

Asia:

The main Asian indices ended today's session with mixed results as investors anticipate a relaxation of impulses due to inflation in the United States. In the case of the Chinese market, it closed with positive returns due to the fact that sales in the automobile market grew 8.6%; in turn, the United States will remove Xiaomi from the blacklist of Chinese products. This in turn had a positive impact on the Hang Seng + 0.78% which also closed with positive returns due to a rally in technology stocks. The Japanese market closed at a loss and reached a new low in 3 months after the vaccination reserve system stopped working causing clear delays in the vaccination campaign. The Korean market closed down, dragged by Wall Street, which could not be offset by the technological upturn. Finally, the Australian market closed at a loss as most of the energy sector shares closed lower as a result of higher oil prices. Thus, S & P / ASX 200 -0.73%, Shanghai Composite + 0.61%, Hang Seng + 0.78%, NIKKEI -1.61%; KOSPI -1.49% closed with mixed results.
