Global Overview:

United States:

Major U.S. indices had a mixed close on Wednesday amid the release of solid economic data and the spread of the Delta variant of COVID-19 on the European continent. Wage processing firm ADP released that the private sector created 692,000 jobs in June, above estimates. Similarly, used home sales soared to 13% y-o-y in May, reaching their highest level since 2005. Thus, the S&P 500 closed with slight gains +0.13% driven by the energy +1.33% and industrials +0.84% sectors after oil prices advanced supported by data suggesting that U.S. crude stockpiles declined by 8.2 million barrels. In corporate news, ride-hailing services company Didi Global Inc prepares to launch its IPO, amid high investor expectations as it ranks as the second largest in the United States. Thus, S&P 500 +0.13%; NASDAQ -0.17%; DOW JONES -0.03% closed the day with mixed performances.

Europe:

European indexes ended the day with negative results, due to growing concerns about rising inflation and cases of the Delta variant of the coronavirus. Despite the rise in technology stocks to record highs, economically sensitive sectors were hit. The pan-European STOXX 600 fell alongside banking, energy and mining stocks. The index is close to posting its biggest first-half percentage gain since 1998, but the double whammy of high inflation has slowed gains recently. In London, the index closed lower after European investors reacted to a series of economic data released on Wednesday: UK first-quarter GDP was confirmed at -1.6%, below expectations, while business investment fell 10.7% quarter-on-quarter due to tightening blocking measures. On the other hand, after June's strong rise in economic confidence, the focus will be on German unemployment figures and Eurozone inflation data released later in the day. Thus, STOXX 600 -0.77%; FTSE 100 -0.71%; CAC 40 -0.91%; DAX -1.02%; IBEX 35 -1.05% closed the day with negative performances.

Asia:

The indexes of the Asian continent closed the day with mixed returns inclined to the positive terrain after it was verified that the current vaccines for COVID19 are also effective against the delta variant, thus generating optimism in investors. The Chinese market closed with positive returns driven by the results of the vaccine studies. The Shanghai Composite +0.85% closed with positive returns driven by the Information Technology sector +2.94% which was also reflected in the CSI 300 +0.65%. Meanwhile, in Hong Kong the market closed with losses led by the Health sector -1.28%, contravening the general market sentiment. The Japanese market closed almost flat but in negative territory with a fall in the Real Estate sector -0.70%. On the other hand, the South Korean market closed with returns, also driven by the technology sector. Finally, the Australian market closed with gains thanks to its rapid vaccination campaign and gains in Communication Services +2.66% and Materials +0.79%. Thus, NIKKEI -0.07%; HANG SENG -0.57%; CSI 300 +0.65%; SHANGHAI COMPOSITE +0.85%; KOSPI +0.30%; S&P/ASX 200 +0.16% finished with mixed returns.
