Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market closed the day with positive results among its main indices. The Dow Jones Industrial Average closed above 23,000 to 23,157.60. The S & P 500 (SPX) and NASDAQ Composite also had positive returns. Trade has had a steep upward trend lately. Analysts such as Maris Ogg, president of Tower Bridge Advisors, said that "so far, the gains have exceeded expectations. I think the most important thing economically this year is Europe's clear and sustainable recovery. We are receiving confirmation of this with almost everyone Europe is creating more demand for China's products, so we have the US, Europe and China in a synchronized recovery. Global economic data confirm positive earnings trends." Turning to the tech sector, shares of International Business Machines Corp. rose 8.9 percent a day after the technology giant posted better-than-expected quarterly results. IBM was the biggest winner of the Dow average for today. Shares of Electronic Arts Inc. fell 2.4% after news that they are closing the unit working on an upcoming "Star Wars" video game. The Fed's Beige Book report, which records economic anecdotes from the central districts of the US central bank, showed that economic growth has varied from modest to moderate, this does not prevent the central bank from continuing with the normalization of the policy of interest rates.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the day with positive results among its main indices. European stocks made gains today thanks to falls in the euro and the pound. In addition, European profits helped by more than 100 points to the "Down Jones Industrial Average" index that stood above 23,000 for the first time in its history. According to analysts, the good news on Wall Street generated a strong USD benefiting European exporters, especially the Germans. As a result, the German benchmark DAX 30 gained +0.40%, finishing at 13,043.03, a new historical closing high. Also, the FTSE 100 index of England reached a value of 7,542.87, which is very close to another historical record. The German and British indices performed well because of the fall of the euro against the dollar; European exporters were the most benefited because their products become more competitive with a weaker euro. The most benefited exporting companies were Pearson PLC, Volkswagen AG, BMW, Burberry, among others. With respect to the United Kingdom, the labor market report showed a fall in real wages for the sixth consecutive month for August, falling 0.4% even when the unemployment rate in the United States remained at 4.3%, the lowest in more of 40 years.

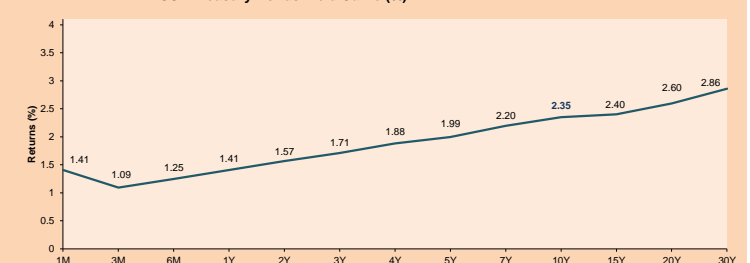

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended today's session with positive results among its main indices. This was because today was the first day of the 19th Congress of the Communist Party of China, which prompted regional investors to negotiate cautiously, as Chinese President Xi Jinping is expected to be elected for a second period of five years. It should be noted that meetings that occur twice a decade usually result in uncertainty because of the economic and political changes that the country may suffer, which would also explain the behavior of investors. Thus, these facts caused the Shanghai Composite index to increase by 0.3%. Regarding Japan, the Nikkei Stock Average benchmark index recorded its twelfth consecutive gain, increasing by 0.1%, helped in part by the slight appreciation of the US dollar against the yen (benefiting exporters, giving their good international competitiveness). Meanwhile, in Hong Kong, stocks were under pressure, causing losses in Chinese financial firms such as China Construction Bank and Industrial and Commercial Bank of China (-0.1% and -0.3%, respectively). On the other hand, according to banking analysts in New Zealand and Australia, Iran's comments that they expected no impact on oil exports in the face of US President Donald Trump's refusal to certify a nuclear deal, and news that Iraqi forces continued to move into Kurdish territory, prompted oil prices to rise.
