Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the session with positive results, emphasizing that the S & P 500 and the Nasdaq finished at historic highs on Friday, recording their first weekly gains in three weeks. In addition, retailers were in the spotlight in the middle of Black Friday shopping vacations, a day after national markets closed in due to Thanksgiving. In more detail, Adobe Analytics data showed that online shoppers spent 1.52 billion dollars on Thanksgiving, and smartphones accounted for 46% of all traffic going to retail sites in the United States. In business news, General Electric rose modestly + 0.22%, after the US Securities and Exchange Commission said board member James Tisch bought three million shares worth $3.7 million dollars a night Wednesday. This comes after purchases of a total of approximately $ 2 million in shares by the company's new chief executive, John Flannery, and board member Francisco D'Souza, during the last week. In summary, General Electric has lost -42% of its market value since the beginning of the year.

Europe:

The European stock market closed today with positive results among its main indices. With the exception of the British FTSE 100 index, which was slightly affected by the setbacks in the shares of the medical care, consumer services and oil and gas sectors. In macroeconomic news, retailers of all types will find themselves in strong competition as the Christmas shopping season approaches. On the other hand, in political news, the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Theresa May, plans to travel to Brussels to discuss matters of Brexit with the President of the European Council, Donald Tusk, in which the Prime Minister is expected to extend an offer of 40 billion pounds sterling for a so-called "divorce law" with the European Union. On the other hand, there are concerns among the companies about the permanence of the customs union of Northern Ireland with the European Union after Brexit, since the former is part of the United Kingdom. In other news, the euro appreciated against the dollar today, surpassing the 1.19 dollar mark per euro for the first time since September. This was supported thanks to the data observed today of the Ifo indicators of Germany, which measure the business sentiment of the economy.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended today's session with positive results among its main indices. Among the news that stood out the most, in Japan, the Nikkei 225 benchmark began in negative territory as the country was updated after yesterday's Thanksgiving holiday. But an appreciation of the US dollar (from 111.20 yen per dollar to 111.50 yen per dollar) helped exporters gain international competitiveness by costing them less to ship their products. In Australia, the S&P/ASX 200 index fell by 0.1% (ranking among one of the region's lagging markets), caused by the decline in major Australian banks. Meanwhile, as expected by market participants, the People's Bank of China injected a small amount of cash into the financial system at the beginning of the day (3.04 billion dollars), suggesting that Beijing is not worried about the nervousness of the stocks. On the other hand, in general terms, concerns about liquidity helped boost stocks that fell yesterday, in part because of the recent weakness of the Chinese bond market. The 10-year bond yield has been reaching a 4%, a maximum level of three years.
