Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market finished today with positive results among its main indices. This marked the third day of recoveries followed by the indexes after the strong reductions they had in the past week. However, the three largest indices in the United States remain more than 7% below the record levels they reached in January, in macroeconomic news, there are concerns that the January inflation data to be presented this Wednesday will provoke another wave of sales as seen last week, since the effects that higher than expected inflation can have on the plans of increases in the interest rate of the Federal Reserve. If interest rates are raised, it could cause more setbacks in the price of the shares. On the other hand, in news on commodities, the price of gold futures increased during the session thanks to the US dollar falling back with respect to its major rivals, as it returns to cheaper gold for those investors who use other currencies. Also, the possible increase in inflation could further increase the price of gold because it is seen as a hedge against price rises.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the day with negative results among its main indices. This setback towards correction territories could be a signal that the concern about increases in inflation and bond yields stills present. The European Stoxx Europe 600 index (SXPP) fell by -0.63%, with the telecommunications sector reporting the highest losses. On the other hand, the sectors with the best performance were those of raw materials and consumer services. Likewise, the German DAX 30 index fell by -0.70%, the French CAC 40 fell by -0.60% and the English FTSE 100 fell by -0.13%, affected in part by expectations of rising BOE's interest rate. On the other hand, the price of precious metals denominated in dollars has been driven by a weakening of the US dollar (DXY) thus helping the mining companies listed in Europe. Among the main values, the shares of the mining company Anglo American PLC (AAL) rose by + 1.70% and Glencore PLC (GLEN) rose by + 2.48%, the shares of luxury goods maker Kering SA (KER) fell -3.95% and service company TUI AG (TUI) rose + 1.22% after it posted lower than expected losses.

Asia:

The Asian stock market closed the day with positive returns among its main indices. The Hong Kong indices and the Shanghai composite index gained positive results today. With respect to Japan, the "Nikkei 225" index closed with losses due to an appreciation in the yen, after yesterday's news about the renewal of Haruhiko Kuroda as governor of the Bank of Japan, which, according to analysts, could lead to a more restrictive policy. Ashwin Murthy, administrator of the Global Opportunities hedge fund AVM Singapore, said that "the Bank of Japan could focus its efforts to stabilize yields on the government's 5-year bonds instead of 10 years. That would lead to a so-called stealth reduction that could allow the central bank to raise longer-term debt rates without reducing the size of its quantitative easing program." In China, the bags are preparing for the Lunar New Year holiday, so the commercial link between Hong Kong and China will be closed from Tuesday until next week. In Hong Kong, it will not be possible to commercialize shares until February 22. Regarding the profits, Singapore Airlines Ltd. reported the net profits of the fiscal third quarter. Unfortunately, the results did not exceed the analysts' estimates. Analysts expected a profit of $ 304 million according to Factset, while the real result was $ 286.1 million.
