Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with negative results among its main indices, the sectors most affected were energy and finance. For its part, this morning Washington's media reported that the Secretary of State, Bex Tillerson, would leave the White House and be replaced by the director of the CIA, Mike Pompeo. Among other news, the consumer price inflation report of February showed results in line with those expected by investors. The general and main CPI, in annualized figures, remained at 2.2% and 1.8% respectively, these figures are not alarming in terms of inflation, this added to the slack that is still felt in the labor market, generates some peace of mind on expectations to the rise of the interest rate of the FED. Also, these results had some effect on the price of the dollar, slightly reducing the gains that had been accumulating. On the other hand, among the expected increases in the FED rate, the first is expected to be at the end of March. In terms of business news, the biggest declines in the technology sector were from Microsoft Corp. with -0.20%, from Alphabet Inc. with -0.33% and Facebook Inc. with -0.32%.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the day with negative results among its main indices. European stocks broke the six-day winning streak today, when the euro and sterling strengthened against the dollar. The European benchmark index "Stoox 600" fell by approximately -1%, its highest loss since March 2, according to FactSet data. In addition, the index with the highest loss was the German index "Dax 30" which fell close to -1.6% as most of its member companied today. The main teuropean indices such as the "FTSE 100", "CAC 40", "IBEX 35" fell by an appreciation in the euro and in the pound, as the dollar fell after the US consumer price index in February It rose 0.2%. This reading waned the concerns of an increase in interest rates by the Fef. Regarding the United Kingdom, the British Chancellor the Exchequer, Philip Hammond, in his spring statement said that the Office of Budgetary Responsibility raised its growth forecast economic growth for the year 2018 to 1.5%. That is modestly higher than the previous estimate 0.1.4%.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended the day today with mixed results among its main indices. This occurs in a context of expectation on the part of the investors before the last reading of inflation of the United States, which will probably give an idea on whether the Federal Reserve accelerated or not its rate of increase of the interest rates. On the other hand, the benchmark index of Japan, the Nikkei 225, closed in +0.7% after having remained in losses during the beginning of the session, closing in positive for the fourth consecutive day. The rise was due to the weakening of the Japanese yen against the US dollar, thus allowing higher profits for Japanese exporters. On the other hand, shares of mainland China fell by -0.49% according to its Shanghai Composite index, this occurred after plans to merge banking regulators with insurance companies were announced. On the other hand, the shares of the Hong Kong benchmark index, the Hang Seng, ended without much variation, closing at +0.02%. On the other hand, Australian shares fell by -0.36%, mainly due to weaknesses in the shares of the largest mining and oil companies.
