Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with slightly negative results, while the dollar appreciated and the yield on 10-year bonds declined after contradictory signals in trade talks between the two largest economies in the world. In a larger picture, the trade was in the minds of investors when US President Donald Trump said he was determined to prevent China from "taking our jobs, taking our money" while US and Chinese negotiators met for a second day to try to avoid a tariff war. On the other hand, the US arms lobby is targeting banks that hate guns after Citigroup and Bank of America said they would no longer offer certain banking services to gun makers, according to industry lobbyists. In more detail, after the shooting at the Florida high school in February that killed 17 people. Weeks later, Bank of America said it would no longer lend to companies that manufacture military-style firearms for civilians. Finally, oil prices fell, but Brent crude marked the sixth consecutive week of gains, driven by the fall of Venezuelan production, strong global demand and the impending US sanctions on Iran.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the session with negative results among its main indices. The British market was dragged by the fall in the price of the shares of the pharmaceutical giant AstraZeneca, as well as a pause for breath in the price of the shares of oil companies after a long rise in the price of that commodity. The British FTSE 100 index fell -0.12%, while the pound sterling depreciated -0.2516% on Friday, fell to $1.3475 from $1.3516 last Thursday in New York. On the other hand, Prime Minister Theresa May rejected the reports published at the beginning of the week where Great Britain was looking to stay in the customs agreement with the European Union. Instead, his cabinet agreed to a backdrop proposal that would align the United Kingdom with EU tariffs after 2020 to avoid a difficult border with Ireland. For its part, the Italian policy remains in focus after the two largest populist parties agreed in their program plans to cut taxes and increase fiscal spending. Investors fear that the Italian credit rating will be affected by this political noise. In business news, Ferrari NV fell -0.88% after Antonio Picca Piccon was appointed as the new CFO, while the price of Ubisoft shares rose +4.47% after an encouraging profit report.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended the day today with mixed results among its main indices. On the Japan side, its benchmark index, the Nikkei 225, reached its highest point in the last 3 and a half months as it grew by +0.40% during the session. Japanese exporters benefited from the depreciation of the yen against the US dollar, the latter reaching its highest point with respect to the yen since January 23 of this year. In addition, financial stocks extended their gains today, thanks to the performance of US Treasury bonds remained high. On the other hand, both Hong Kong and Chinese shares closed higher today, with investors hoping that Beijing and Washington can reach an agreement in the latest round of negotiations on import tariffs imposed by both countries. China on the other hand offered to the president of the United States, Donald Trump, a package of proposals for the purchase of American goods, as well as other measures with the objective of reducing its trade deficit by about 200 billion dollars a year.
