Global Overview:

United States:

Closed market due to Memorial Day.

Europe:

The European stock market ended the day today with negative results among its main indices. It should be noted that the London market was closed due to a bank holiday. On the other hand, the European market was mainly affected by the actions of Italy, which fell back as investors observe the growing possibilities of new elections. This happens after the recent sessions formed a coalition between two anti-establishment parties with the intention of forming a government. In today's session, the president of Italy, Sergio Mattarella, blocked this coalition by rejecting his candidate for economy minister, Paolo Savona, who has expressed his vision of the country leaving the euro. On the other hand, the political problems in Spain intensified, after the main opposition party called a no confidence vote on Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy, due to the corruption case that ended up condemning a former treasurer and other members of high office of his party. The vote is expected to take place on Friday and the debate begins in parliament on Thursday.

Asia:

The Asian market ended the day with positive results among its main indices. The Japanese Nikkei closed with +0.13% while in China the Hang Seng rose 0.67%, driven by optimism in Korea and the fall in oil prices. Regarding the meeting between Donald Trump and Kim Jong Un, rumors are rising that it could be resumed after US officials arrived in North Korea to help plan a meeting between the two leaders. Additionally, both Korean leaders had a surprise meeting on Sunday to discuss improving their relationships. In business news, China's largest technology group, which includes Alibaba Group, Baidu Inc and Tencent Holdings, better known as BAT, bought the intelligent factory unit of Hon Hai Precision Industry, Apple's most important assembler. At the close of the day, its shares had grown 2.66% in Taiwan. On the other hand, the shares of the Chinese company CSPC Pharmaceutical increased 3.78% in Hong Kong after revealing that it had growth above the already high market expectations during the first quarter of the year. The stock has increased 65.08% so far in 2018, having the best performance within the Hang Seng index.
