Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market closed with rising results after the sell-off generated by the uncertainty about trade policy between the United States and its counterparts, a matter that is still pending and unfinished. In business news, the price of General Electric Co shares rose above 8% and are on track for their biggest daily jump since April 2015. Profits came after the industrial conglomerate said it plans to spin off its services business. of health and download your property at the oil company Baker Hughes. Among other winning companies, he highlighted the shares of Lennar Corp construction company that rose more than 4.00% after reporting that the results of the second quarter exceeded analysts' forecasts. On the other hand, President Trump threatened the iconic motorcycle company Harley-Davidson with higher taxes, as well as a public reaction if he continued with his plan to move production to European customers abroad. In the currency market, the price of gold closed at its lowest level for 6 months in view of the gains reported by the US market, as well as the strength of the dollar.

Europe:

The European market finished the day with slightly positive results among its main indexes, still dealing with the effects of the trade war. The Stoxx 600 regional index closed at +0.02%, after having yesterday its highest daily fall since March. On the other hand, the FTSE100 of the United Kingdom had the highest result with +0.37%, while in Germany the DAX30 (-0.29%) and in France the CAC40 (-0.05%) closed downwards. After yesterday's big fall, it is suggested that today's positive result is due more to a rebound by yesterday's low prices, than a change in fundamental values or a new event that encourages investors. In business news, the German BMW fell -0.70% after announcing that it would close its factories in the United Kingdom if its supply chain was impacted by the Brexit. In addition, the rating agency Moody's warned that the car industry would be severely affected after the threat of the United States to place tariffs of 25% on imported vehicles in response to tariffs imposed by the European Union at the beginning of the month, even reaching to obtain a negative credit rating. The measure would not only affect manufacturers, but also parts suppliers, dealers and transport companies.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended the day today with mixed results among its main indices. In the Japanese market, its benchmark index Nikkei 225 closed with a slight increase of +0.02%, recovering this way from the losses that it had at the beginning of the session, when it reached its lowest point in the last 3 and a half weeks, thanks to the fact that investors made hedges of the most battered shares to which short sales were made. On the other hand, shares of the Shanghai Composite Reference Index of China fell -0.52%. This setback comes in response to news that the US government is in favor of new restrictions on Chinese investments in US technology companies. For his part, Chinese President Xi Jinping suggested that his government will respond against any of the parties to come. On the other hand, the Hong Kong benchmark index, the Hang Seng, closed with a decline of -0.28%, its lowest point in the last 6 months, due to investors' fears about a possible trade war.
