Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with negative results, following a fall in the technology sector, with Facebook slipping in renewed concerns over its data scandal. Facebook fell about 1.9% after the Washington Post reported that a federal investigation into the data breach linked to Cambridge Analytica and other government agencies was expanded. In other news, Tesla dropped a 5.1, declining for the second consecutive session because of questions about whether it could maintain the pace of manufacturing of its Model 3 cars. After working 24 hours a day for weeks to exceed a production goal, Tesla Inc. will interrupt part of the production of Model 3 this week, according to people with knowledge of the subject. For its part, oil prices rose on Tuesday after Libya decreed force majeure measures on some of its crude exports, while the loss of Canadian supplies helped raise US values to a maximum in three and a half years. US light oil, West Texas Intermediate (WTI) rose 99 cents, or 1.3 percent, to 74.93 dollars per barrel, its highest level since November 2014, before falling slightly to 74.79 dollars per barrel.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the session with positive results among its main indices. The British market shares closed higher on Thursday, the FTSE 100 index rose + 0.60% after experiencing in the last session the worst fall since June 25 as a result of commercial tensions between the United States and the European Union, being telecom and health sectors those that showed the best performance. However, shares of the heavyweight commodities Glencore PLC fell after a subpoena from the Department of Justice of the United States. The Stoxx Europe 600 rose + 0.81% which seems to show greater calm in the region after the German Chancellor, Angela Merkel, reached an agreement of migration with one of its partners in the coalition, easing the tensions that the issue upsets to your government. The pound sterling went from buying $ 1.3144 to $ 1.3191 last Monday in New York. In economic news, construction activity in the United Kingdom peaked at seven months in June, the PMI reached 53.1, up from 52.5 in May and exceeding the FactSet estimate of 52.5.

Asia:

The Asian market ended the day with mixed results among its main indices maintaining the downward trend due to the trade war. The Hang Seng of Hong Kong fell -1.41% after yesterday's holiday, while in China the Shanghai Composite closed positive with +0.41% and in Japan the Nikkei225 closed at -0.12%. The comments of officials of the People's Bank of China contributed significantly to boost the value of the yuan, where his governor indicated his plans to keep the yuan at a stable and reasonable level, this being the bank's first statement after the currency fell 3.7% against the dollar in the last 3 weeks. For its part, the consumer price index in Seoul increased 1.5% with respect to the previous year in June, however, they are still well below their annual inflation target of 2%; while exports fell due to the concerns of a trade war, after having a value above that expected in May. In business, the news that the United States prohibited the entry of a new Chinese company into the local telecommunications market worsened market returns.
