Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with positive results. The S & P 500 index advanced through the 2 800 level for the first time since March, as investors consoled themselves with an ongoing pause in trade tensions, beating a mixed start-to-earnings season. On the other hand, energy and industrial stocks, which had taken the brunt of sales during the ongoing trade dispute, led the advances in the benchmark index. In addition, the price of the shares of Citigroup Inc. and Wells Fargo & Co. fell after expectations were lost, while the shares of AT & T. They fell after the Justice Department said it would appeal an antitrust decision in favor of the company. Meanwhile, West Texas oil rose above a 70 a barrel, but most metals declined, and gold approached the lowest close in a year. Finally, the dollar was heading for its biggest weekly gain in a month, while the 10-year Treasury yield was on track for its first weekly advance in five.

Europe:

The European market closed with slightly positive results among its main indexes during the day on Friday, ignoring the tensions of the commercial war and focusing on the US earnings season, when companies publish their quarterly results. In the region, the Stoxx 600 grew by 0.17%, with France with the CAC40 having the highest results (+ 0.43%). It is followed by the DAX30 of Germany (+ 0.38%) and the FTSE100 of the United Kingdom (+ 0.14%). In contrast, the Spanish IBEX index closed downwards with - 0.33%, with Distribuidora Internacional de Alimentación being the company with the highest losses after Barclays warned that it could report difficult results, falling by 14.59%. Similarly, the company Altran Technologies fell 28.21% after finding that there was at least $ 10 million in counterfeit purchase orders from a company that recently made purchases of $ 1.9 billion, an event that is under investigation. On the other hand, the government of the United Kingdom published a report with details of what the relationship between the country and the European Union would be, where a trade without friction between both parties is demanded, which was criticized for not being a clear break between the United Kingdom and the European bloc.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended the day today with mixed results among its main indices. For its part, the benchmark index of Japan, the Nikkei 225, closed with a growth of +1.85%, staying well above its moving average of the last 200 days. This growth was partly due to the weakness of the yen with respect to the US dollar, thus benefiting Japanese exporters. Profits were led by defensive stocks such as Fast Retailing, a Japanese public retail company, which grew by +6.95% after posting positive profits. On the other hand, the Hang Seng index of Hong Kong ended with a growth of +0.16%, thus extending its profits from the previous session. However, in mainland China, the benchmark Shanghai Composite closed at -0.23%, after two sessions of gains close to 2%. Even so, Chinese stocks managed to have their best week in the last 2 years, with gains of +3.1% for the week. In economic news, yuan loans from Chinese banks increased in June, rising to 1.84 trillion yuan from 1.15 trillion yuan in May, in an effort to improve economic growth, which faces increasing difficulties due to persistent trade tensions, with the United States.
