Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market closed the session with positive results among its main indices. The S&P 500 index was quoted at its highest point since its highest level at the end of January, underscoring a resurgence in the shares of a correction period at the beginning of February. The talks between Donald Trump and the European Union have favored the good performance of the US market, but one factor that has had more weight are the profits reported by US companies. 146 firms of the S&P 500 have reported profits, of which 92% they have exceeded the estimated EPS, while 77% have exceeded the estimated earnings, according to Randy Frederick, vice president of trading and derivatives of Charles Schwab. However, a handful of disappointing results, including notable firms such as Boeing, General Motors and AT&T, limited Wall Street's optimism. On the other hand, on Wednesday, gold futures closed modestly higher at $1,231.80 after a choppy start earlier in the week, while oil futures ended solidly on Wednesday after data showed a larger-than-expected drop in prices. The household inventories of last week.

Europe:

European markets closed the day with slightly negative results among their main. The Stoxx Europe600 fell 0.26%. Investors remain on the lookout for the earnings season, since only 140 of the 600 companies have presented their quarterly results. Of these, 61% have exceeded their sales expectations and 37% exceeded their projected earnings. Fiat shares fell 9.2% after their profits fell 35% in the last quarter and cut a series of goals set for 2018, while, on the opposite side, the French manufacturing company SEB it went up 9.22% after posting positive results. Luxury goods products are expected to reduce their profits by 30% if a full commercial war were to be implemented, according to an analysis by US, with the Swiss watchmaker Swatch, the Italian Salvatore Ferragamo and the British Burberry brands being the most affected. Finally, a fundamental point today would be the meeting between the president of the European Commission and the president of the United States, where the former seeks not to impose tariffs on vehicles and to reduce those already applied to steel and aluminum. However, at the end of the session the meeting had not yet begun.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended with positive results among its main indices. The gains of this session followed the solid advances of the European and American markets of the previous session. Japan's benchmark index, the Nikkei 225, closed with a growth of +0.46%, driven by the shares of steel companies and metal producers, in which the market encourages the Bank of Japan's promises to adjust its fiscal policy. On the other hand, stocks of the Shanghai Composite Index of China were between gains and losses, ended slightly downwards at -0.07%. The actions of the vaccine manufacturer Kangtai stood out when it fell by -9.96%. Also, the actions of his medical pair Changsheng stopped in this session after seven consecutive days of losses in the middle of the scandal of vaccines against the rage, in which this company is accused of having falsified its data of production and inspection. On the other hand, the stocks of the Hong Kong benchmark index, the Hang Seng, continued with their strong earnings, closing at +0.90%, driven mainly by solid gains in the financial sector.
