Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market closed with positive results among its main indices. Amazon Inc announced that it would raise the minimum wage of its workers to $15 per hour for the following month. This increase would place the company above Walmart and Target Corp, however, it still pays $7 less than the average salary for non-administrative transportation and storage work in the United States. Tesla announced record quarterly auto production figures on Tuesday, but warned of major problems with the sale in China due to the new rates. The price of oil fell slightly on Tuesday, after hitting 4-year highs. After General Electric replaced its executive director and announced a charge of $23 billion, risk rating agency Moody's said it would review the ratings of GE's financial unit. Gold closed above $1,200 an ounce as the concerns of Italian policy (target budget deficit 3 times higher than the previous government) were expanded to other financial markets, so the price of ore reached its level of closing higher in almost two weeks.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the session with negative results among its main indexes due to the budgetary concerns of Italy and Greece added to a growing commercial tension. Fears of a crisis in the eurozone resumed on Tuesday, after a legislator from the La Liga party surprised markets by saying that Italy could be better off outside the European Union. Given this situation, the Prime Minister, Giuseppe Conte, came out to say that Italy is totally committed to the euro and that any criticism of this should be taken as an individual opinion and not as a policy decision. Continuing with news from Italy, on Monday the economy minister, Giovanni Tria, was in trouble, since Italy has not respected the fiscal rules of the European Union. Italy should submit a full draft budget to EU officials in mid-October. In Greece, the shares were under pressure after the government presented the draft budget. In the United Kingdom, the post-Brexit migration plan of the British Prime Minister, Theresa May, has been questioned by senior figures from the European Union. This plan is to restrict migration, based on skills to filter the few qualified.

Asia:

The Asian market ended the day on Tuesday with mostly negative results among its main indices. In Japan, the Nikkei was alternating between positive and negative terrain to end up with a small gain of 0.10%. Among the stocks with better performance we find Takahimaya Co (-4.49%) and Showa Shell Sekiyu (+4.41%), the latter maintains a cumulative return of 101.48% in the last year. On the other hand, the yen continues to depreciate and today reached a price of ¥114 per dollar, its lowest value so far this year as a result of the international strengthening of the dollar. In other news, even though the stock market in mainland China is still not operating for the holiday week, a new problem appeared with the United States after it was reported that a Chinese vessel was harassing a US Navy vessel when it was sailing through the South China Sea. Hong Kong operates normally and the Hang Seng index obtained disappointing results of -2.38% caused by the decline of shares of banks such as HSBC (-2.10%). The index marked in September the fifth month of consecutive losses.
