Regionally the Stook Europe 600 index closed at -0.37%, while in France the CAC40 ended at (-0.48%) and the German DAX managed to recover to finish at +0.02%. The tension between Italy and the European Union increased after the Deputy Prime Minister, Luigi DI Maio, indicated that it is unlikely that they would be subject to a sanction for not meeting the limits on the fiscal deficit for the 2019 budget, implying that they would not change its budget to satisfy the European bloc and causing negative results in the Italian FTSE MB index (-0.88%). Among the main news, the People's Bank of China mention that the economy faces a downward pressure after the update of the last report about the implementation of the monetary policy of the central bank. GDP slowed to 6.5% in their quarter, its weakest quarterly paces since the financial crisis. In addition, he mentioned that he would encourage financial institutions to increase credits to small private companies, with one third for these while the rest for the private sector.
