Global Overview:

United States:

The US market closed the day with negative results, where shares stop the rally while the dollar continues growing. In other words, demonstrated by the S&P500's decline (-0.09%). US stocks halted a three-day rally, while the dollar rose amid concern over the pending trade agreement with China. On the other hand, treasury bonds remained stable, while their unemployment rate went to a maximum of four weeks. Moreover, the American investors, in order to maintain their positive returns, would have to take many factors into account as the events of the economic slowdown or the operators in Europe every day more pressured by the Brexit impact on them. In other news, shares of Turtle Beach Corporation (-12.57%), a sound technology company that designs audio accessories for game consoles, fell in the extended session of the New York Stock Exchange after announcing the acquisition of Roccad, a peripheral computer company, and the disappointing result for Q1. In other words, the company projects adjusted earnings for the mentioned period of 5 cents per share, below the average Wall Street estimate of the 7 cents.

Europe:

The main European markets culminated the day in positive terrain, driven by the results of yesterday's Brexit vote, which expresses the desire of the British legislators to avoid an exit without agreement (hard Brexit), and by positive perspectives on today's vote. The Pan-European index, the Stoxx 600 (+0.78%), which groups shares of companies from 17 countries in the region, ended the session upwards, while European shares are in a maximum of five months. A Goldman Sachs analyst said that there is a 60% chance that an agreement similar to that proposed by Theresa May will be eventually ratified, while the chances of an exit without an agreement have been reduced to 5%, reported Reuters. Investors keep their eyes on the United Kingdom, where the possibility of an extension to the deadline will be voted only 15 days before it's due. This vote will take place after the market closes, but it should be noted that this unilateral expression must be endorsed by the Union European to be effective. In other corporate news, the Italian company of aerospace, defense and security, Leonardo (+13.23%), presented its best day in 7 years after reporting a significant increase in its profits and a rise in sales in 2019.

Asia:

The Asian market closed the day with mostly negative results, where, despite the slight growth of the Hang Seng (+0.15%), other indicators of China such as the Shanghai Composite (+1.20%) or the Shenzhen Composite (-2.31%) retreated by a greater margin. In addition, the slowdown in China affects employment even when signs of recovery emerge. With an industrial index having its worst start to the year since 2009 and retail sales expanding at a slower pace since 2012, the unemployment rate jumped to 5.3% in February from 4.9% in December, the highest level in two years. However, the investment in fixed assets and properties increased during the same period. On the other hand, the most important festival in China, the Lunar New Year, would be the main cause of the disappointing economic indicators since the beginning of the year, says the statistical authorities. Moreover, President Donald Trump said about China that, although he was optimistic that there will be a final agreement, it may not come to an accomplishment if the terms are not to his liking. In Japan, one of the biggest contributors for the Nikkei 225 (-0.02%) was the SoftBank Corp. (+ 1.31%), after a report indicated that it would carry out the investment of 1 million USD in the unit of self-handling cars from Uber Technologies.
