Global Overview:

United States:

The US market closes with negative performances. The DOW JONES index closed lower with a -1.56% performance, due to a weak performance of stocks related to the communication services sector (-2.32%) and non-core consumer products (-2.13%). The worst performers in this index were Walgreens Boots Alliance Inc (-5.67%) and Intel Corp (-3.64%) as it has kept its annual projections unchanged despite having higher earnings than expected by Wall Street, which means that it expects more moderate results for the rest of the year. As for Intel Corp, the losses are due to the fact that analysts expect positive returns from the new GPUs but not significant with respect to the competition, as well as an adverse reaction from investors to Intel's purchase of an Israeli company. Meanwhile, the S&P500 index ended with a -1.57% return on expectations of further monetary policy tightening due to inflationary pressures derived from the global context and the Russian-Ukrainian war. Also, the cost of mortgage loans in the US has reached levels not seen since December 2018, according to reports from Freddie Mac. Finally, the NASDAQ index returned -1.54%; driven by a drop in inflation-adjusted spending, i.e., lower spending suggests that the speed at which prices are rising is disincentivizing demand. Thus, DOW JONES -1.56%; S&P 500 -1.57%; NASDAQ -1.54% ended the day with negative results.

Europe:

The main European indices ended the session with negative performances. The pan-European STOXX 600 index ended the session in negative territory caused by the shares of the Consumer Staples (-2.19%) and Information Technology (-1.1%) sectors. On the other hand, the consumer confidence indicator in the Eurozone came in at -18.7 for March, representing the lowest level since May and driven by low expectations of an improvement in the economic and financial situation. The FTSE 100 maintained the trend due to the fall in crude oil prices since the White House announced the release of 180 million barrels of oil, as well as a contraction in Chinese manufacturing activity. Also, housing prices rose faster than expected. Regarding the German market, the DAX index closed with losses, weighed down by the non-core consumer goods and products sector, as retail sales fell by almost 2% for February, which was lower than the market forecast. Finally, the French market ended with a negative performance as inflation reached its highest level since 1985 and accelerated to 4.5%. On the corporate front, Worldline (-6.65%) was the worst performer as Apple is developing technology and infrastructure that would compete directly with the company's payment system provider. Thus, FTSE 100 -0.83%; CAC 40 -1.21%; DAX -1.31%; STOXX 600 -0.94% ended with negative results.

Asia:

The main Asian indexes closed with negative performances, in a context where Russian attacks persist while peace talks are underway and Biden is expected to tap the oil reserve, hoping to reduce gasoline prices. The Chinese market closed lower in the face of prospects of a slowdown as authorities restrict production and mobility in cities such as Shanghai and Shenzhen to end a wave of COVID-19 outbreaks. The Hang Seng index ended lower as a contraction in China's manufacturing sector heightened concerns about a further slowdown in growth, and the risk of Chinese companies being banned from U.S. stock exchanges for allegedly failing to comply with the law. The South Korean market closed in positive territory as the Biden administration is expected to consider releasing 1 million barrels of oil per day from the strategic reserve for about six months. Japan's NIKKEI closed negative on aggressive selling triggered by increased uncertainty as peace talks between Russia and Ukraine fail to make significant progress. The Australian market fell this session as hopes for a diplomatic solution to the conflict in Ukraine diminished on news of Moscow's shelling of the outskirts of Kiev. Thus, NIKKEI -0.73%; HANG SENG -1.06%; CSI 300 -0.59%; S&P/ASX 200 -0.74%; KOSPI +0.40%; SHANGAI COMPOSITE -0.44% ended with negative performances.
