WORLD

United States:

The US market closed with negative returns. The DOW JONES finished in the red, following the release of the U.S. ISM services PMI, which hit a four-month high of 53.4 in January, beating expectations of 52. The S&P 500 index also ended with negative performance, as the PMI release, along with Fed Chairman Powell's latest remarks on Sunday, reduced expectations of a March rate cut. Finally, the NASDAQ index ended the day lower. On the corporate front, Meta shares fell 3.2% as investors took profits following last week's strong results. Boeing lost 1.3% after the company said it would revisit 50 undelivered 737 Max aircraft due to the discovery of improperly drilled holes in some airframes. Tesla fell 3.6%, hitting its lowest level since May, amid concerns about increased competition and persistent pricing pressures for the electric vehicle giant. Thus, DOW JONES -0.71%, S&P 500 -0.32%, NASDAQ -0.20% ended with positive returns.

Europe:

Major European indices ended Monday's session with negative returns. The pan-European STOXX 600 index closed negative, as stronger-than-expected data on the US labor market, coupled with a cautious stance from Fed Chairman Powell, reduced any lingering expectations of early rate cuts by the US central bank. The UK market, reflected in the FTSE 100 closed with a slightly negative performance, as markets continued to assess the timing and extent of the rate cuts that the Bank of England and other major central banks will eventually implement. On the other hand, the German market reflected in the DAX index closed in negative territory, in a context in which trade figures revealed more significant declines than expected in both exports and imports of Europe's largest economy. The main index of the Paris stock exchange ended the session in negative territory, as another batch of bullish economic data in the US extended the selling pressure on government bonds and prolonged expectations of high benchmark borrowing costs. Thus, FTSE 100 -0.03%; CAC 40 -0.03%; DAX -0.08%; STOXX 600 -0.05% ended with negative levels.

Asia:

The main Asian indices started the week mostly in the red. The Chinese market closed at its lowest point in five years due to ongoing economic and political uncertainties weighing on investors. While the Chinese securities regulator pledged to stabilize the market, investors seek concrete actions to support both stocks and property markets. Additionally, investors closely monitored data showing continued expansion in China's service sector for 13 consecutive months. Hong Kong's Hang Seng index ended with losses following Federal Reserve Chair Powell's statements, disappointing investors regarding interest rate cuts in March. The South Korean market saw negative results in a session with little movement. In Japan, the Nikkei index ended with gains, buoyed by high profits of US tech companies and investor optimism. Additionally, a depreciation of the Yen boosted market sentiment. The Australian market also closed in the red, retracting from record highs, with mining and energy stocks leading the decline due to weaker commodity prices. Investors also exercised caution ahead of the Reserve Bank of Australia's monetary policy decision, where steady interest rates are expected. Thus, NIKKEI +0.54%; HANG SENG -0.15%; CSI 300 +0.65%; S&P/ASX 200 -0.96%; KOSPI -0.92%; SHANGHAI COMPOSITE -1.02% closed with mostly negative returns.
