► United States:

The US market closed with positive returns. The DOW JONES ended with gains, largely driven by substantial increases in the technology sector, despite rising Treasury bond yields. Traders were closely watching upcoming retail sales data and a series of Federal Reserve officials' speeches for insights into the potential timing of the Fed's first interest rate cut. The S&P 500 index finished in the green, as key economic data including retail sales, industrial production, and global PMIs from S&P are also anticipated. Meanwhile, New York State's manufacturing index exceeded expectations but continued to indicate a decline in business activity. Finally, the NASDAQ index closed higher for the day, boosted by gains from megacap companies; Apple and Microsoft rose 2% and 1.3% respectively, while Tesla surged 5.3%. Nvidia declined 0.6% following reports that the chipmaker is likely to have over 20% weighting in the rebalancing of its technology exchange-traded fund. Thus, DOW JONES +0.49%, S&P 500 +0.77%, NASDAQ +0.95%, reflecting positive market returns.

► Europe:

The main European indices closed with negative returns. The pan-European STOXX 600 index closed with gains. European stocks saw strong volatility due to last week's sell-off, which was triggered by French President Emmanuel Macron's call for early elections. Although European assets initially rose when far-right leader Marine Le Pen assured investors that she would not try to unseat Macron if she won, those gains quickly faded. In the English market, the FTSE index closed with losses. Heavy industrial miners were among the session's biggest losers as downbeat data on Chinese industrial production, property investment and housing prices disappointed, putting pressure on base and ferrous metal prices. Glencore lost 4%, while Rio Tinto and Anglo American fell about 1% each. Similarly, the German market closed positively. Rhenish steel saw the biggest drop, falling more than 5%, followed by Adidas, which fell more than 3% after a Financial Times report revealed that the company is investigating allegations of large-scale bribery in China. By contrast, Deutsche Boerse rose more than 2%. In the French market, the session closed with gains. Investors started the week on a positive note, continuing to closely monitor ongoing political developments in the region. Five ECB officials told Reuters there are no plans for emergency purchases of French bonds amid the current political unrest in Paris, emphasizing that it is up to French politicians to reassure markets through sensible economic policy. Notable gainers included shares of Stellantis NV, which rose 0.9% after a report that a joint venture led by Stellantis had begun production of electric vehicles for China's Leapmotor at the Tychy plant in Poland. Thales shares also rose 1.2% after announcing its plan to quadruple its ammunition production capacity at a national facility, fulfilling a major order from the military. Thus, FTSE E -0.06%; CAC 40 +0.91%; DAX +0.37%; STOXX 600 +0.09% closed with mixed returns.

► Asia:

Major Asian indices closed with negative performances. The Chinese market closed negative, where industrial production and fixed asset investment rose less than expected last month, while the urban unemployment rate remained at 5%. In terms of monetary policy, the People's Bank of China maintained the medium-term interest rate at 2.5%, as expected. Elsewhere, the Hang Seng index is in the negative as investors digested economic data out of China, better-than-expected retail sales that contrasted with weakness in housing prices and declines in industrial production and fixed asset investment. The South Korean market ended negative, weighed down by losses from e-commerce companies and battery makers. Investors were also cautious ahead of the release of U.S. economic data this week to assess its impact on the Federal Reserve's monetary policy outlook in light of the Fed's updated rate projections and cooling inflation data. The Japanese market also closed lower as investors continued to assess the Bank of Japan's latest policy decision. On Friday, the BOJ left interest rates unchanged, as expected, and stated that it will maintain the current pace of Japanese government bond purchases. However, the central bank added that it will unveil a plan on tapering its bond-buying program at the next monetary policy meeting in July. The Australian market ended negative, weighed down by losses in the mining and energy sectors amid weak commodity prices. Investors were also cautious ahead of this week's Reserve Bank of Australia policy decision. The Bank is expected to hold the policy rate at 4.35%, but is likely to reiterate that it does not rule out further hikes if inflation rises. Thus, NIKKEI -1.83%; HANG SENG -0.03%; CSI 300 -0.15%; S&P/ASX 200 -0.31%; KOSPI -0.52%; SHANGHAI COMPOSITE -0.55% ended with negative returns.
