United States:

The US market closed with negative returns. The DOW JONES closed with losses as US stocks experienced a severe sell-off on Monday due to increased fears of a US recession. Additionally, the CBOE Volatility Index, known as Wall Street's fear gauge, rose to its highest level since October 2020. The S&P 500 index ended in the red, despite the ISM Services PMI report revealing a strong rebound in the services sector, with new orders and employment recovering from June's contractions, though price pressures have increased. Lastly, the NASDAQ index finished the day in the red as weaker-than-expected earnings from leading tech companies and growing uncertainty in the AI sector weighed on the market. Nvidia's shares fell 7.1% after dropping as much as 15%, while other major tech stocks also saw significant declines, including Microsoft (-3.3%), Apple (-5%), Amazon (-4.4%), Meta (-2.5%), and Alphabet (-4.2%). Tesla (-4.2%), Broadcom (-1.1%), and Qualcomm (-0.5%) were also in the red. Thus, DOW JONES -2.60%, S&P 500 -3.00%, NASDAQ -3.43% with the market having negative returns.

Europe:

Major European indices closed with negative returns. The pan-European STOXX 600 index closed with losses due to fears that major economies will succumb to the pressure of high interest rates, triggered recently by the weak US labor market and magnified by pressure from the rising Japanese yen. Insurers Allianz, Axa and ING fell by more than 2.5%. In addition, TotalEnergies, Iberdrola and Enel lost nearly 3%. Finally, automakers also fell victim to the sell-off, with Volkswagen, BMW and Stellantis dropping between 3.1% and 2.6%. In the English market, the FTSE index closed with negative returns, triggered by a wave of global selling on concerns about the weakening of the US economy. Energy stocks fell by more than 3%, following a third consecutive session of oil price declines, while the mining sector also experienced losses, with industrial metals falling by almost 2% and precious metals suffering a 3.5% plunge. The automotive and parts sectors were the hardest hit, down 5.8%. In the French market, the session closed with losses. Meanwhile, the French composite PMI was revised down to 49.1 for July 2024, although up from 48.8 in June. On the other hand, the French services PMI stabilized at 50.1, up from 49.6 in June, but missed the preliminary estimate of 50.7. Following the stock market decline triggered by last week's disappointing U.S. labor market data, the financial and luxury sectors ended in negative territory, with BNP Paribas, Crédit Agricole and Société Générale falling between 1.7% and 1.8%. The top losers were Teleperformance, STMicroelectronics and Veolia Environment, down 5.4%, 4.1% and 3.8%, respectively. The German market, as measured by the DAX index, closed in the red. Under a context marked by growing concerns about rising interest rates in major central banks and the weak US employment report, the financial sectors were the hardest hit, where Deutsche Bank and Commerzbank fell by 2.57% and 2.68% respectively. BMW and Volkswagen fell nearly 3%, while Infineon outperformed the Dax and closed in the green after presenting corporate results. Thus, FTSE -2.04%; CAC 40 -1.42%; DAX -1.82%; STOXX 600 -2.17% closed with negative performances.

Asia:

Major Asian indices closed with negative returns. The Chinese market closed negative, as weak US employment data stoked fears of a recession. Meanwhile, data showed that Chinese services activity expanded more than expected in July, amid solid demand conditions at home and abroad. However, investors remained cautious about the country's economic outlook, awaiting clearer signs of a rebound as authorities step up policy support measures. On the other hand, the Hang Seng index is in negative territory, tracking negative market sentiment globally. Investors also reacted to the confirmation of a bear market in Japan, after the Nikkei plunged more than 12% on Monday, posting its worst day since "Black Monday" in 1987. The South Korean market ended in negative territory, following a broad sell-off in shipbuilding and semiconductor stocks, with index heavyweights Samsung Electronics and SK Hynix leading the losses, giving up 10.3% and 9.9%, respectively. The Japanese market also closed lower, suffering its worst one-day decline since "Black Monday" in 1987, entering bear market territory. This comes as investors are worried about the possibility of interest rate hikes in Japan. Last week, the Bank of Japan raised its policy rate to 0.25% and signaled its willingness to keep raising rates, with markets betting on two more hikes this fiscal year ending March 2025. The Australian market ended negative as investors prepared for the Reserve Bank of Australia's latest monetary policy decision. Markets were anticipating a possible rate hike by the Reserve Bank of Australia this week, but lower-than-expected inflation figures caused traders to scale back those bets. Thus, NIKKEI -12.40%; HANG SENG -1.46%; CSI 300 -1.21%; S&P/ASX 200 -3.70%; KOSPI -8.77%; SHANGHAI COMPOSITE -1.54% ended with negative returns.
