Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with negative results among its main indices, motivated by disappointing quarterly corporate earnings results presented on the day. It should be noted that the biggest losers of the session were the shares of Chipotle Mexican Grill and those of Advanced Micro Devices, falling 15% and 12% respectively. In other news, 10-year Treasury bond prices continued to weaken, pushing yields to their highest since March at 2.44%. This is in the context of investors waiting on President Donald Trump's election to head the Fed once President Janet Yellen's term expires in February next year. In more detail, in a meeting with Republican senators on Capitol Hill, Trump asked the senators' opinion on who the next president should be, with Stanford economist John Taylor as the apparent winner. In commodity news, oil prices receded according to the United States benchmark oil index, December West Texas Intermediate, due to the increase in domestic oil supplies. On the other hand, gold prices ended the session with modest gains as the US dollar fell against its major rivals, according to the ICE US Dollar Index.

Europe:

The European stock market closed the day with negative results among its main indices, all benchmark indicators had losses for today. The whole Eurozone is preparing for one of the main decisions that will define economic development across Europe, on Thursday, the European Central Bank will start the bond repurchase plan. One of the most affected countries would be Italy, as this country has the largest debts in the entire Eurozone, which means that it will have trouble finding buyers for its government bonds. Citigroup economist Christian Schulz said that "as political uncertainty increases, it will be much more difficult for Italy than for other countries. The country has a large amount of debt, which makes it much more sensitive to changes in the interest rate." On the other hand, in the United Kingdom, the reading of economic growth was stronger than expected, which strengthened the pound against the dollar, generating losses in English stocks. More in-depth, a preliminary reading of the UK's gross domestic product for the third quarter generated by the Bureau of National Statistics showed a quarterly growth rate of 0.4%, higher than the forecast of 0.3%, as a result of the survey of economists of FactSet. Mixed inflation, retail sales data along with comments from the "Monetary Policy Committee" have raised uncertainty over whether the Bank of England will move interest rates this month to reverse last year's cut of 0.25%.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended today's session with positive results among its main indices. Among the important events that occurred, US Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin said the United States would impose sanctions on suspected terrorist financiers in Yemen, targeting eight individuals and an organization for supporting the militant groups Islamic State and al-Qaeda in Yemen. This could generate uncertainty in the stock market later on. Compared to Japan, its benchmark Nikkei 225 fell for the first time in seventeen days (-0.5%), as investors took profits after multiple days of gains, fearing that at any point in time they may lose profitability. Among the companies that lost the most because of this fact were Mitsubishi Motors and Fanuc (-1.6% and -1.1%, respectively). Meanwhile, Singapore and Hong Kong have decided to join forces, after competing for the supremacy of financial technology centers in recent years. On the other hand, in China, the ambitions for the country to become a global semiconductor power has increased, in a situation that they cannot out-spend the likes of Intel Corp. in the short run.
