Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with positive results, due to the state of US companies as the fourth quarter earnings season began. In addition, financial stocks were among the most profitable, after the group's high profile results, while energy rose because crude oil traded close to a maximum of three years. However, a sharp decline in the actions of Facebook overshadowed one day otherwise. The price of JPMorgan Chase & Co. shares rose +1.07%, despite reporting a 37% drop in profits, although this was largely related to the single charges associated with the new tax law, which is expected provide additional long-term gains. On the other hand, Facebook shares fell around -4.70%, after Chief Executive Mark Zuckerberg said that the social media website will prioritize personal publications of family and friends about business and media publications, affecting the investors, since in the last years it has visualized the lucrative advertising dollars of video and video as one of the keys of its future.

Europe:

The European stock market ended the day today with positive results among its main indices. Highlights are the actions of the UK FTSE 100 benchmark index, which ended up reaching a new record. These were driven by the best expectations about the corporate earnings of the current season. Likewise, the shares of the industrial group GKN grew by +26.24%, its biggest increase in a day, after they announced their plans to separate their automotive businesses from aerospace. In news from the Eurozone, the growth of its economy in the last three months to September was greater than expected, reaching 0.2% growth. This indicates that it is very likely that the growth of 2017 will reach 2.4% predicted by the economists of the European Central Bank. In currency news, the euro reached its highest level against the US dollar since the beginning of 2015 after German lawmakers agreed on a coalition plan between Chancellor Angela Merkel's conservative CDU party and the center-left party of Martin Schulz. In more detail, in the general elections of September 24, 2017, Chancellor Merkel's party won the elections without an absolute majority, and therefore seeks to have a coalition with the opposition party. On the other hand, sterling reached 1.3688 dollars per pound, positioning near its highest level since the Brexit referendum in June 2016.

Asia:

The Asian stock market closed with positive results among its main indices, with the exception of the Japanese benchmark index "Nikkei 225" because the news from the Japanese Central Bank about the cut in purchases of government bonds continues to affect the sentiment of the investors. On the other hand, the other Asian exchanges had gains today. The Hong Kong benchmark "Hang Seng" advanced close to +0.9%, marking its 14th gain, closer and closer to its historical peak achieved in 2007. Analysts such as Ric Spooner of CMC Markets say that this rise in Asia could revert next week, so we must wait a little longer to confirm the optimistic sentiment of the markets observed at the beginning of this year. On the other hand, Chinese stocks registered little change in quotations, as trade data showed a much lower increase than expected in imports last month. With respect to the companies, the Chinese technological giant Tencent issued 5 billion dollars in 5, 10 and 20 year bonds, its first sale of this type since 2015. The company opted for the fixed income market to finance its purchases of "start-ups" and game companies made in the last four years.
