Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with mixed results, due to the measures chosen by the administration, which caused a fall on industrial companies, although the technology sector boosted the Nasdaq index. In business news, Dropbox Inc. on Monday ranked the stock for its initial public offering that would value it up to $ 7 100 million, almost a third below the valuation that commanded in 2014, a clear sign of how the private technology market it overheated it became a few years ago. In other news, United Steel Corp. raised its annual profit forecast on Monday, as the largest steelmaker in the United States appears to benefit from President Trump's plan to impose tariffs on imported steel and aluminum. However, not all companies have benefited from this measure, as is the case with the aircraft production company, which fell by 2.9%, since these tariffs could increase costs and hinder sales abroad. Finally, the energy sector fell due to the moderate temperatures in the United States that reduced the demand for heating for natural gas.

Europe:

The European stock market closed this Monday for the sixth time in a row with positive returns among its main indices, this was mainly due to the positive results presented on Friday in the employment report of the United States, which were interpreted by investors as a good signal for the purchase of shares; as well as for the good performance of the German industry. However, the actions of the British market did not have the same results, although they started the day up, the FTSE 100 closed with a yield of -0.13%, dragged by the negative effect that the tariff policy has on the British mining companies, which represent 87% of the weighting in the basic materials sector of the index. Among other news, the European Union continues to make efforts to be exempted from President Trump's tariff policy. For its part, the euro went from buying $ 1.2307 to $ 1.2317 at the close of Friday in New York, while the pound also strengthened from buying $ 1.3848 to $ 1.3891 the same day. Among the most outstanding moves of the day, the company focused on Renewable Energy, Innogy SE, had an increase of + 11.85% after E. ON SE said on Sunday that it agreed, in principle, to acquire the 76.8% stake of RWE AG in Innogy. This move will allow E. ON to focus only on energy networks and operations related to the consumer.

Asia:

The Asian stock market closed the day with positive returns among its main indices. Asian stocks managed to end up in positive territory after the results of the employment report for the month of February, which eased investor concerns about inflation in the United States. The Japanese benchmark index "Nikkei 225" managed to have a profit greater than + 1%, helped by the technological stocks being its highest closing since February 28. Since, in the United States, the Nasdaq technological index reached its record close of all time. This helped technology companies such as Tokyo Electron, Sumco, Shin-Etsu Chemical, Panasonic Corp., Canon Corp. and Nikon Corp. close with profits greater than 1.5%. Japanese stocks managed to gain despite a strengthening of the yen against the dollar. Like the Hong Kong index, "Hang Seng", and the South Korean index "Kospi", which managed to grow more than 1%. Regarding China, the Agricultural Bank of China reported that its net profit of 2107 increased by 4.9% reaching 30.5 billion dollars. The bank reported that its operating income for 2017 increased + 6.1%, while its net interest margin was extended from 2.25% in 2016 to 2.28% in 2017.
