Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with positive results, offsetting the losses in Asia, as an expected strong earnings season boosted the indexes while the US president cast doubt on the timing of his threat of attack on Syria. In a larger picture, investors focused on corporate profits in the United States, while BlackRock, the world's largest asset manager, reported quarterly earnings above Wall Street estimates with its shares rising 1.5%. In news related to the geopolitical conflict, the risk of confrontations between the Western powers and Russia in Syria for an alleged chemical attack diminished somewhat when Trump reformulated his threat on Wednesday that the missiles will "come" while mocking Russia for supporting the Syrian president. Bashar al-Assad. On the other hand, the yields of treasury bonds rose, due to geopolitical fears, boosting the appetite for assets perceived as moderate refuges. Finally, oil prices fell initially as geopolitical concerns declined somewhat, but then recovered, supported in part by the decline in global oil inventories.

Europe:

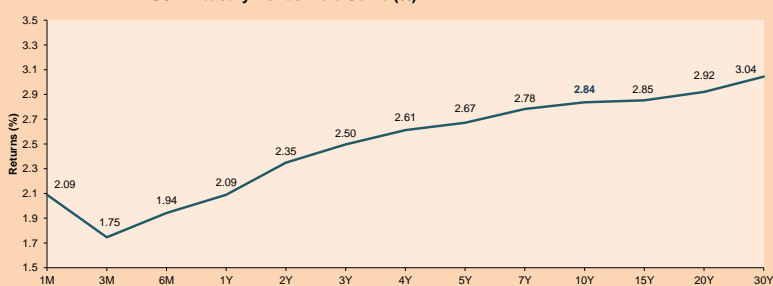

The European stock market ended the day today with positive results among its main indices. Equity markets were positively affected after concerns over a potential military conflict in Syria eased after the chemical weapons attack that killed civilians in Damascus over the weekend. This happened as the president of the United States, Donald Trump, pointed out that a missile attack on Syria might not be imminent or even not happen at all. On the other hand, in the United Kingdom, the Prime Minister, Theresa May, called on her cabinet to discuss whether they support the military actions proposed by the United States. According to the BBC, she is willing to take action without first consulting the parliament. In macroeconomic news, the minutes of the last meeting of the European Central Bank suggest that the central bank will move gradually out of its program of monthly purchase of bonds for 30 billion euros and will begin to increase interest rates. Bank officials warned during their meeting that the possible trade war and the strengthening of the euro could undermine the economic recovery of the eurozone.

Asia:

The Asian market closed with negative results among its main indices. The Composite Index of Shanghai SCHOMP fell -0.87%, the Taiech of Taiwan fell -0.17%, while the Japanese Nikkei declined -0.12% dragged by its manufacturing, materials and technology sector. This fall in Asian markets was influenced by President Trump's tweet in which he announced that he could launch a missile attack on Syria. Among other news, China's Ministry of Commerce issued its latest attack on US protectionism saying that "the country would fight without hesitation" and that it is not currently in communication with Washington. In terms of business news, the company Samsung Electronics raised +0.29% which initially boosted the Korean index (SEU), however, this index closed the session with a negative result of -0.06%. On the other hand, its central bank maintained the rates, which is in line with market expectations. As for the Hong Kong dollar, the city's de facto central bank said in a statement that it has so far refrained from buying Hong Kong dollars, even if it is forced to sell US dollars to defend the value of its currency.
