Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with positive results, given the optimism in the face of an avalanche of optimistic profits that offset the nervousness over the increase in yields on Treasury bonds. In more detail, the 10-year US Treasury yield, a benchmark for global borrowing costs, ended up above 3% as the supply of public debt increased due to a deficit of income after the massive fiscal review. On the other hand, Boeing shares rose 4.2% after the company reported better-than-expected earnings amid strong commercial aircraft sales, which allowed it to raise its forecasts after a record in 2017. However, Twitter it fell 2.4% after the social media company said it expected a slowdown in revenue growth and rising costs, which would hamper its otherwise optimistic earnings report. Finally, Facebook shares rose on Wednesday after the social network reported revenues that exceeded Wall Street estimates, without showing an initial impact on its lucrative advertising business due to a scandal over the handling of personal data.

Europe:

The European market closed the day with negative results in most of its indexes. The increase in interest rates on US Treasury bonds had a major impact on the main European indices, such as the FTSE100 which fell by -0.62% after 6 consecutive days of gains, the German DAX which fell by -1.02% and the Euro Stoxx 600 European index that had a loss of -0.77%. The population is waiting for the decision of monetary policy of the European Central Bank this Thursday where the economic growth in the Eurozone will be discussed. On the other hand, the French unemployment fell 1% with respect to the previous quarter, giving good signs of the recovery of its labor market. The reduction in the number of people seeking employment occurred in all age groups, but mostly in the segment between 25 and 49 years. In other news, Britain's Shire PLC said it would recommend its shareholders accept the proposal of its Japanese counterpart Takeda Pharmaceutical for its acquisition. Although the price of its shares fell today (-2.8%), the shares have increased their price by 30% since the end of March, when the purchase intentions began. Similar case occurred today when American media and communications company Comcast Corp. announced its intentions to buy British pay TV operator Sky PLC, and shares of the latter rose +3.90%.

Asia:

The Asian stock market closed the session with negative yields, mainly pressured by the low yields of the technology sector and the effect of the rise in the yield of 10-year treasury bonds on world markets. That is why many of the Asian indices closed in red, for example, the Hong Kong HSI index closed at -1.01% and that of South Korea SEU at -0.62%. For its part, the technology sector continued to be beaten, Samsung Electronics closed with a bearish performance of -0.12%, while Sunny Optical at -3.26%. Many of the companies of Asian chips have been contracted by the preoccupations on a smaller demand of Smartphone, it is necessary to remember that to this is added the prohibitions of the American government to the American companies to buy components to the Chinese giant ZTE, this could be understood by some investors as a technological war. Among other responsible for this fall, you can also contribute the low profits reported for this first quarter by some companies like WH Group, which ended up sliding 9%. In the case of the Japanese market, the Nikkei index fell -0.28%. The markets of Australia and New Zealand are closed for holidays.
