Global Overview

United States:

The US stock market ended the day with negative results among its main indices, after the decision of President Trump about withdrawing from the nuclear agreement with Iran, which will increase geopolitical tensions generating the dollar to appreciate and bond yields of the Treasury increase. In more detail, the yield on 10-year Treasury bonds reached 2.967%, while the 30-year bonds reached a peak of 3.121%. In addition, the Treasury Department auctioned 31 billion dollars in 3-year notes with a high yield of 2.666%, also auctioned 25 billion in 10-year notes and 17 billion in 30-year bonds. In addition, the Treasury Department has been under greater pressure to finance the huge budget deficit of the federal government, opting to increase the size of its debt auctions and maintain rates as a result. In business news, Deutsche Bank AG is considering a restructuring in the United States, which would result in a reduction of 20% of its staff, given that the German bank withdraws from a market where it is considered less competitive.

Europe:

The European stock market ended the session with mixed results. Investors remain on the lookout for President Trump's decision on the nuclear deal with Iran. This concern has caused the energy sector to be the most affected, with oil companies reporting the highest losses on the day. Although the price of oil has been increasing in recent weeks due to the expectation that the United States will leave the agreement, on Tuesday the price of West Texas oil fell -2.80% and Brent -2.31%. For its part, the Italian market experienced a sell-off in stocks and bonds after the two largest political parties, the far-right league and the 5-star movement, did not reach an agreement on a political coalition. For this reason, it is expected that this summer there will be new general elections in Italy, after the inconclusive electoral process that was held in March of this year. On the other hand, a wave of encouraging earnings reports increased the share price of companies such as Notably Shire PLC (+4.63%), Takeda Pharmaceutical Co (+3.99%), among others. In economic news, the German industrial production recovered in March increasing 1% since February, while the price of houses in the United Kingdom fell -3.1% in April compared to the previous month.

Asia:

The Asian market closed the day with positive results among its main indices. The Hang Seng of Hong Kong led the region's gains with +1.36%, while the Japanese Nikkei225 index increased +0.18%. Geely Automobile Holdings had the highest growth within the Hang Seng with +5.28%, while in the Nikkei, the fishing company Maruha Nichiro Corp had the highest yield, +5.69%. The market remained on the alert due to the news of the possible exit of the United States from the nuclear agreement with Iran, due to the consequences that could bring, as commercial and economic sanctions for Iran. However, at the close of the Asian market there was still no response from President Trump. On the other hand, Chinese exports and imports rebounded in April, anticipating the imposition of possible tariffs for the trade war with the United States. Although no measure has yet been implemented, exports increased by 12.9% in April compared to the previous year and imports did so by 21.5%, also under the analyst's expectations, which also resulted in a surplus of commercial balance 43.8% greater than that of the month of March. In other news, Taiwan's inflation held up during the month of April.
