Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market closed the session with negative results among its main indices. Higher indexes closed the day with the largest daily losses in weeks, while the Dow Jones index fell to its lowest point in two years after the commercial tensions between President Trump against its commercial allies. The falls spread rapidly in most sectors of the main indices. For example, 26 of the 30 components of the Dow index closed down, while 9 of the 11 sectors of the S & P 500 showed the same behavior. The technology sector showed the highest losses during the session, falling -2.3%. The market changed again after President Trump published a tweet in which he made a call to his business partners to withdraw their trade barriers and artificial tariffs or to reciprocate. This tweet can be addressed to the European Union that began to apply tariffs on $ 3.2 billion in imports from the United States. With respect to China, President Trump is expected to announce restrictions on Chinese investments at US technology firms over the weekend.

Europe:

The European stock market finished the session with negative results among its main indices, after the last episode of a commercial dispute between the United States and other major economies. In more detail, a report by President Trump plans to increase car import tariffs in the European Union (EU) by 20%. In addition, the EU and China pledged to oppose trade protections in apparent reprimand to the United States, saying that unilateral actions could put the world in a recession. However, despite its alignment with the US trade threat, the EU and China are still confronted by issues such as the lack of reciprocal access for European companies and the reluctance of the EU to support the trade and infrastructure program of the EU, China's Belt and Road initiative. In business news, Britain's largest real estate firm, Countrywide, plunged around 27% after issuing its third earnings warning its plan to raise capital to refinance the debt. From its debut in the stock market to the present, a series of tax changes, limited affordability and worries about Brexit have shaken the industry, taking the prices of intermediaries' shares to the lowest level to date.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended today with negative results among its main indices, which closed near their lowest points of the session. Today's results are partly due to the fact that trade problems between the United States and China continue to generate uncertainty among investors. Also, the shares of technology companies were affected by reports that US President Donald Trump could even announce measures to block Chinese companies from investing in US technology firms, further worsening trade tensions. On the other hand, the most recent cut in the reserve requirements ratio of banks by the People's Bank of China was ignored by investors, since this measure was already anticipated and some even expected it to be a greater reduction to the half of a point that was announced for next week. On the other hand, the Japanese benchmark index, the Nikkei 225, fell by -0.79%, affected in large part by the fall in the price of the shares of Sharp Corp, an electronics manufacturer, in -5.1% after the company will announce that it will issue 78.4 million shares in a public offering. In addition, the yen appreciated against the US dollar, slightly affecting the actions of Japanese exporters because investors found themselves mainly selling defensive stocks during the session.
