Global Overview:

United States:

The US stock market remained closed due to the celebration of the Independence Day

Europe:

The European stock market ended the session with mixed results among its main indices. The Stoxx Europe 600 index rose +0.06%, with the telecommunications and public services sectors at the top, as finance showed slight gains; while the industrial and consumer services sectors lost the most. In the case of the British stocks, they ended modestly to the downside since the US financial market remained closed for the celebration of Independence Day, as well as for the commercial reprisals of China towards the United States and the possibility of an international agreement of the European Union to reduce tariffs on car imports. Thus, the FTSE 100 index fell -0.27%, while the pound sterling rose appreciated against the dollar going from buying $ 1.3193 to $ 1.3218 last Tuesday in New York. European Union officials were weighing the idea of reaching a plurilateral agreement with the major automakers to cut automotive tariffs according to the Financial Times, this move could help avoid a total trade war, since Trump has said that the threat of Global automotive tariffs is your biggest weapon to extract concessions from trading partners.

Asia:

The Asian stock market ended the day today with mixed results among its main indices. Most of these closed with losses in which shares of technology companies followed the weaknesses in the US markets, which are due to persistent trade tensions and will continue to be maintained this week in what is expected to be put ongoing tariffs by China and the United States this Friday. In more detail, the massive sales of shares on Wall Street yesterday were led by the decline of Micron Technology Inc. at -5.51%, after it was announced that the company would be temporarily blocked from selling its memory chips in China. On the other hand, the Japanese benchmark index, the Nikkei 225, closed with a decline of -0.31%, affected by commercial problems and by an appreciation of the yen against the US dollar, this being its third consecutive decline. Similarly, China's Shanghai benchmark fell -1.00%, affected by the appreciation of the yuan against the dollar. This appreciation came a day after the central bank assured markets that it would keep the currency stable in the face of concerns over trade disputes.
